THE PHILADELPHIA SMUGGLERS. PHILADELPHIA, March 21, 1868.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:-In Friday's issue of your paper, among a list of phis and smugg a goods found on board, you mention the name of the vessel I command, schooner Ellie L. Smith, stating that a trunk was found on board containing dress goods, cigars, &c.; that the captain's wife was sitting d: that her reluctance to arise excited their susons; that on searching the bed cigars and other pulated to do me injury I request you to publish calculated to do me injury I request you to publish the facts as they really are.

My vessel arrived at Philadelphia from Clenfuegos wit a cargo of sugar, molasses, &c. Among the cargo was one trunk, which was on the vessel's manifest.
The revenue officers visited the vessel, and notwithstanding the trunk was properly entered, broke it open and found it to contain ladies' wearing appagred and some other articles. My wife was not on board the vessel during the passage, nor at the time the detectives visited me, and the statements of your correspondent therefore are without foundation.

BELFORD SMITH,
Master of schooner Ellie L. Smith.
